Why support education?

Many young people and adults risk exclusion from the workforce because they do not have the required skills. At the same time, many jobs remain unfilled due to the lack of qualified personnel. This has a negative impact on the growth of businesses and economies. The EU's Strategic Framework for Cooperation in Education and Training identifies the gap in skills and competence and the rapidly changing needs of a dynamic labour market as important European challenges. Students and young people who gain experience through studies or training abroad are more likely to find employment upon graduation than their peers who study at home.¹

What is supported?

Initiatives supported by the Grants include:

- Institutional cooperation at all levels of education
- Better quality and relevance of education and training
- Skills development for jobs
- Adult participation in lifelong learning
- Professional development of teachers
- Higher education student and staff exchange between Donor and Beneficiary States

Where we work

Education funding is available in eight Beneficiary States.
